WISE INVESTING WILL MAKE FOR AN EASIER RETIREMENT

By Jeff N Marquis and Kerry J Harrison

Almost all of us spend more than half of our lives worrying about where to invest our hard earned income or how to keep our savings safe. So many of us spend sleepless nights worrying over money that we have lost in the stock markets, bad investments in companies that have not performed well, or various other ventures that have gone belly-up.

We are not going to tell you that any investment is absolutely free from any risk but we are going to tell you that there are some ways in which you can make your investments safer. You will need to devote some time to carry out some careful and serious research in order to make our suggestions work. If you follow our research tips we can guarantee that you will see results sooner than you expect.

In previous issues we have told you about these hidden and untapped markets that are going to be around for many years to come. We have told you why these markets are going to be around for such a long time and we have also told you about the seismic shifts in our society that have caused them to develop and flourish. In addition we have told you that these markets exist both in the United States and around the world and that the American government and other Governments such as Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and many European Governments are scrambling frantically to find resources to help them cope with these markets which are starting to spiral out of control.

Just to remind you: As of the end of 2002 there were about 750 million persons worldwide who belonged to some of these markets and 55 million of them alone were living in America. In America, the gross income for this market at the end of 2002 was about one trillion dollars, and they spent about 4.3 billion dollars alone in specialized products. As of 2003 another market consisted of about 171 million global consumers and 18.2 million of them were Americans and experts are predicting that this market would probably grow to about 228 million global consumers by 2025. As of March 2005 another market consisted of about 888 million global consumers and it is estimated that yet another market presently makes up well over 50% of the global population.

Your task will be to research those companies who offer products, services, information, and training to consumers of these markets. You have to find those companies that cater to the needs of our baby boomers, our seniors, our special needs population, our diabetics, our Internet consumers, and our fast growing number of immigrants to the United States whose first language is not English.

Look at those travel companies who go out of their way to offer tours and cruises to seniors, those insurance companies who offer special services to baby boomers and seniors, business and industries that are developing access technology for our special needs population, and fashion outlets that are paying particular attention to the fashion needs of our aging population.

Pay special attention to the e commerce companies that are starting to realize the demands of our seniors, baby boomers, immigrants to the United States, and our special needs consumers. Look at those companies who are marketing their products and services to the growing Internet market. It is estimated that by the end of 2005 this market will consist of about one billion consumers worldwide. Look at those companies that are selling products and services to our rapidly growing group of diabetics worldwide. Learn about the products and services that are being offered to those persons who are engaged in global trade and commerce.

If you follow our suggestions here we are very sure that you are going to be very surprised. Many of our clients have been trying it and over 90% of them are telling us that our hints and tips are paying off handsomely for them.
