WHY BANKS ARE SEEKING YOUR EXPERTISE

By Jeff N Marquis and Kerry J Harrison

No folks this is no joke! You are definitely not going insane! Yes, the majority of banks in America are desperately seeking the type of expertise that we are going to tell you about. 99% of the time our banks seek you out in order to convince you to borrow from them at what they call very attractive rates of interest, but now the tides are starting to turn and indeed we are witnessing a seismic change in the banking industry.

You are probably wondering why this is so and for the very affordable price of only one minute of your time we will tell you. You see, because of the rapidly increasing demands of some very influential markets that are growing so swiftly in size, the United States Government has passed legislation that is forcing companies to start producing the products and services that are being demanded by these markets.

The American Government does not really have a choice in the matter because these markets are not going to go away. In fact, these markets are threatening to grow out of control both in demand and size and many governments around the world have acknowledged this and are dealing with the problem in a similar way to that of the United States. These governments include: Canada, Britain, Australia, New Zealand, France, Germany, and more.

The year 2003 has started a significant trend for some very large groups in the United States who have decided to take some of the biggest American banks to court in order to force them to supply the services and products that these large markets are seeking. The American government is in full support of these suits and if these groups win as most experts are saying that they will then you can expect that the banks will have to pay millions and millions of dollars in damages.

So who are these markets that we are referring to? They are the consumers who by 2010 experts tell us will be in control of 70% of our banking assets and they will make up 60% of our population. They belong to an extremely powerful group as you can see and based on these stats you can just imagine what the overall picture is going to be for the world as a whole. It is therefore not difficult to see why our banks are in serious difficulty.

Now is the time for you to start building your expertise.

The banks are going to need you any day now as well as the American Government and other banks and governments worldwide. You need to learn about the types of products and services that these very rich and untapped markets are craving for.
